THURSDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 13.

CHRISTMAS.—Do any of our readers begin to feel Christmas in their bones? Are their minds beginning to be exercised about Christmas trees, and hanging up stockings, and buying pretty toys and pretty books for children?—Are their hearts softening any towards their fellow men?

We have often thought that a man's heart, at least during this joyous and festive season, ought to resemble his lighted and happy home, made ready for Christmas celebration. Now, the house, how dreary soever it may generally stand, either cheerless in the wintry weather, or naked of trees and flowers, shines and flashes out upon the night, with lights in all its windows, and bright red fires that glow through the curtains, and all of its halls are resonant with music, or echoing laughter, or at least are filled with the burden of kind and hospitable words. Likewise, the revelry is made more joyful by the chorons of the dancers' feet, and the good cheer which graces the sideboard.

That is the way in which a man's heart should be adorned for Christmas: lighted up—warmed—"harmonized," and mellowed into kindly thoughts and charitable actions.—Lynchburg Republican.
